

The following process is for referring a young person to PCYC's case management program.

What's Case Management?

Case management involves supporting a young person to achieve the goals that they feel are important to them. Though the journey of case management looks different for each individual young person, the overarching themes include the building of support networks and positive relationships and increasing their ability to understand and navigate systems and processes through goal setting and achievement.

Case management isn't counselling, or therapy, but can result in positive outcomes such as the building of life skills, increased resilience, self-esteem and protective behaviours, improving social connections, developing meaningful relationships, and an increased stability in various life domains.

PCYC's case management program is driven by the young person, assisting them to identify areas of support, and create achievable goals.
